2) In the application placed below Mr.Matthan has asked for a house building advance of one years pay amounting to Rs.16,800. Under the existing rules the advance applied for is admissible. At the recent Session of the R.A. a resolution recommending that house-building advances should not be given to officers on pay of more than Rs.250/- had been proposed but it was withdrawn. The Government of India appear to have ordered recently that these advances should carry interest at 5 per cent. Mr.Matthan's request is admissible under existing rules and it may be sanctioned. The question of amending our rules may lie over until the demand for it is pressed by the R.A or the L.C. It is desirable to continue the grant of interest-free advances to Government servants to build houses for their use and the only question is if any maximum limit should be placed for such advances and this may also be considered when it becomes necessary to revise the existing rules.
